Oh, I remember them. No we don't have any ownership or custody of the tanks, though I think they are still part of a claim we have against the Sesko estate.

As for the Ked, let me know if you hear back. It would be great if the Navy wants to cut them up in the shipyard. Let me know if I can help.

Currently I am working on a contract with Concrete Tech in Tacoma to rent their graving yard in Sept for the Ked, Kopcakoe and other ships, but I have plenty of boats to work on that could fill the Ked's spot. I will check in with you before I put it out to bid. I have been out to it several times recently because the former owner (prior to (b) (6)) had a lien on the boat and was hoping to reseize it under his lien and make some money off scrapping it. I met his representatives out there but I think that is not going to pan out.

Melissa,

Our Public Works Director is trying to convince the Navy that they should take the Ked and cut it up in the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard. Sounds like a fabulous plan to me; I assume DNR would allow it. The question has arisen as to whether the DNR has also taking ownership of the two "submarine raising tanks" on the beach at the same location. You may not remember them, I've attached the photo I have that was taken by the Coast Guard.
